As per my previous email, attached is a draft outline for a chapter on Transnational Organized Crime to be published in late 2010. The publisher, Routledge, hopes to have the outline by 11 January. I am sorry for submitting it today, but my faculty advisor asked me to write the draft outline Tuesday, 22 December. I will be certain to submit the draft manual 30 days in advance.

Thank you.

Good Morning.

I was hoping someone could answer questions I have regarding the prepublication process. As a PhD student, I was recently invited to coauthor a chapter for a book to be published in late 2010 on transnational organized crime (TOC) with my faculty advisor, James O. Finckenaue, who is an organized crime scholar. I have already discussed this with security, OCIU, OC domain, and the ops section at HQ. For our discussion on TOC, I was hoping to draw information from case information on previously investigated and prosecuted cases, thus, unclassified information. I am currently in the process of writing an outline which the publisher (Routledge) would like submitted by 11 January 2010. I am hoping to have the outline completed within a day or two. Once it is completed, should I submit it to RMD? And if so, to whom do I submit it?

Any assistance with the processes would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

Good morning Mr. Marvelli,

You can send it via Unet to [redacted] We generally allow thirty business days not counting the day of receipt for the review. This review period can be extended depending upon the complexity of the materials being reviewed, but in most cases the reviews are completed within the thirty business day period. Of course the outline should not take that long.
